ACE09 Early Registration Deadline Extended to March 29

(DENVER, CO) – The American Water Works Association announced today that the early registration deadline for its Annual Conference and Exposition (ACE09) has been extended to March 29. Individuals are encouraged to register early for the conference and save up to $200 in registration fees.

ACE09, the world's water event, will feature a professional program with 570 presentations in 100 separate sessions and 17 in-depth workshops. Among the topics covered will be infrastructure maintenance, climate change, conservation and water efficiency, water resources management, legislative and regulatory issues, managing in a down economy, the U.S. economic stimulus package and public affairs.

Additionally, more than 500 exhibitors will be on-site at the San Diego Convention Center showcasing the latest products and services available to help ensure safe water. These exhibitors will offer expert insight and hands-on understanding for everything from pipes to valves, meters to hydrants, engineering services to tank-related companies, membrane filtration systems to laboratory equipment, and security to wastewater.

For more information and to register visit www.awwa.org/ace09 to download the registration form.

Media Note: Accredited members of the media may attend ACE09 at no charge. However, they are required to register with AWWA Public Affairs. For media registration, please visit the press room at www.awwa.org or contact Deirdre Mueller at dmueller@awwa.org or 303-347-6140.
